Fruit and Ornamental Trees FOR SALE.

Proprietors of Fair-Mount Nurseries, Bedderthorpe, Adams County, Pa.

WE would respectfully call the attention of the public to our large stock of Fruit and Ornamental Trees, such as Apple, Peach, Standard and Dwarf Pear, Cherry, Apricot and Plum Trees; Grapevines, Blackberry, Gooseberry and Currant stalks; Ornamental and Evergreen Trees, which we offer for next fall sales. We have appointed JOHN BURKHOLDER, Esq., our Traveling Agent, for Adams County, who is authorized to make sales and take orders.

FAIR-MOUNT NURSERIES having been established for more than 20 years, the proprietors flatter themselves that their trees are of the best selected kinds. Having planted many of them, they know what they are—The greatly increased and increasing spirit of planting, as well as the degree of patronage extended to us, warrant us in greatly extending the Nurseries, so that we are prepared to offer for the autumn of 1860 and succeeding years a much more extensive stock than ever offered before—cultivating from thirty-five to Forty Acres, and containing several hundred thousand Trees at various stages of growth, all of which are grown on soil, and under treatment, best calculated to make a healthy and natural growth.

GEO. PETERS & CO.

The undersigned, having accepted the above Agency for the sale of fruit trees in this County, takes this method of informing the public, that those wishing to purchase Trees will please take the subject into consideration before I call personally upon them, as I expect to convey a portion of the County. All letters upon the subject addressed to me at Bendersville, or left at any of the hotels in Gettysburg, will be attended to. Catalogues can be had at all the Printing Offices. Persons wishing to select from catalogues can see them, and will be in Gettysburg during Court Days, so that persons wishing to purchase fruit trees can see me. The cultivation of good fruit of all kinds has been entirely too much neglected in this County, as the demand for good fruit is very much on the increase.

JOHN BURKHOLDER.

M. R. CHARLES GRIEST holds a note against me, for which I received no valuable consideration. I therefore give notice to every one not to take an assignment of the same, as I do not pay it unless compelled by due course of law.

"IT IS MORE BLESSED."

Given at the morning that dawns out of heaven,
Give us the hours when their charms are given;
Give us the free air and sunshine are given;
Lively, alert, carelessly given.

Not the waste drops of the cup overflowing,

Not the faint sparks of the heart ever glowing,

Not a pale bud from the June rose glowing;

Give as He gave them, who gave us life!

Pour out thy love like the rain of a river,

Washing its waters, forever and ever.

Thine the burnt bands that reward not the giver,

Silent or songful thought nearest the sea.

Scatter the life as the summer shower's pourne!

What if no bird through the pearl rain is sounding?

Look to the life that was lavished for thee!

Give though thy heart may be wasted and worn,

Laid on an altar all when and dryness;

Through from its pulse a faint murmur,

Beats to thy soul the pale prelude of fate,

But it with cords of unbreathing duration,

Smile at the song of its restless emotion!

Then the stern hymn of eternity's ocean;

Heart and in silence thy future await.

So the wild winds strews its perfumed caravans,

Lo and the blossoms of the rose are given,

Never to confess to whisper and sigh,

what if the hard heart are given for thy roses?

What if on rocks thy tried bosom repose?

Sweet is the music with minor-keyed cloches,

Scarce the vines that run along the thong,

Almost the day thy giving is over;

Even from the grass dies the bee-haunted clover,

Thou wilt be vanquished from friend and from lover,

What still the tongue avails in the grave?

Give as the heart giveth when fates are breaking,

Life and hope and all the dreams and thy flowing,

Soon Heaven's river thy soul fever shaking.

Then thou shalt know God and the gifts that gave.

THE SEDUCER.

BY M. H. BLUMER.

Playing with the most sacred affections, he betrays innocence. How? By his noble faculties; by its trust; by its unsuspecting faith; by its tender love; by its humor. The victim, often and often, is not the accomplice, so much as the sufferer; betrayed by an excisor, which bewitched her noblest affections to become the suicides of her virtue. The betrayer, for the most intense selfishness, without one noble motive, without one pretense of honor—by lies; by a devilish jugglery of fraud; by blinding the eye, confusing the conscience, misleading the judgment, and instilling the dev' of sorcery upon every flower of sweet affection—deliberately, heartlessly, damning the confiding victim. Is there one shade of good int'ntion, one glimmering trace of light? Not one. There was not the most shadowy, tremulous intention of honor. It was a sheer, premeditated, wholesale ruin, from beginning to end. The accursed sorcerer opens the door of the world, to push her forth. She looks out all the time straight into the face of the fast young man, and holding on to the eiders.

"Look here, old gimpel eye, I'm getting riled, my back's coming up, and you and I'll have a turn. Snell of that old copperhead," and he thrust his fist under the nose of the east iron Indian, who said not a word, moved not a muscle, but kept right on, looking straight into the face of the fast young man, as if not caring a fig for his threats, or taking in at all the odor of his fist.

"Very well," said the fast young man, I'm agreeable. I'm around, looking for all the time straight into the face of the fast young man, and holding on to the eiders.

"Look here, old gimpel eye, I'm getting riled, my back's coming up, and you and I'll have a turn. Snell of that old copperhead," and he thrust his fist under the nose of the east iron Indian, who said not a word, moved not a muscle, looking with calm, unchanged dignity, as before, in the face of his enemy.

"Hullo," cried the fast young man, in utter bewilderment, as he reeled back half way across the sidewalk, with the blood from his skinned knuckles. "Hullo! here's an eye opener, here's a thing to hurt for around a corner. I'm satisfied, old iron, face, I am. Enough said between gentlemen."

Just then he caught sight of the tomahawk and scabbard in the belt of the savage, and his heart began to rise. The Indian seemed to be making up his mind to use the indictment around his head, while a deeper impression was made on the auditory.

Resuming his speech: "May it please your worships. There are periods in the history of man, when corruption and depravity have so long debased the human character, that man sinks under the weight of the oppressor's hand, and becomes his slave—his abject slave; he looks the hand that strikes him, he bows in passive obedience to the mandates of the despot, and in this state of servility he receives his fettors of perpetual bondage. But, may it please your worships, such a day has passed away! From the period when our fathers left the land of their nativity for settlement in these American wilds—for LIBERTY—for civil and religious liberty—for liberty of conscience—to worship their God according to the dictates of their own consciences."

"I guess I beez," replied Jonathan, "for her got my land just paid for, and own a good joke of steers and a cow."

"Very well," said the old man, with a long breath and sober face, "all these world things may be very proper in their place to be sure—but have you ever thought of salvation?"

This was a poser, and Jonathan, musing, repeated—

"Salvation! Never heard on her. Who the thunder is she?"

Adventure of a Fast Young Man.

"Thank you, don't care if I do," said a young man, with a large pressed briar in his hat, as he surged up to the Indian that stands in front of a tobacco store on Broadway, with a bunch of cast-iron cigars in his hand. "I'll take one, I smoke sometimes," and he reached out to take the professed weed, but the Indian wouldn't give it up. He hung on to the cigars like grim death.

"Look here, old copperhead," said the fast young man, "none of that, no tricks upon travelers, there'll be a muss—if I tell out—somebody'll get a punch in the head."

The Indian said never a word, but held on the cast-iron cigars. He was calm, dignified—unmoved as an Indian should be—looking his assailant straight in the face, and no muscle moved a single hair.

"Yes! yes! Look at me, old feather head! I'm one of 'em, I'm around, I'm full weight, potato measure heaped up," and he placed himself in position, the first sentence of which had caught his ear was, "For preaching the Gospel of the Son of God" when a plainly dressed man dismounted from his horse, entered the court house, and took his seat within the bar—I was known to the court and lawyers, but a stranger to the mass of spectators who had gathered on the occasion. EX-PRESIDENT TYLER AND MR.

CLAY.

Among the addresses delivered by distinguished gentlemen on the occasion of the inauguration of Mr. CLAY, was one by Ex-President TYLER, who was present by invitation. We are glad that the moderate length of this speech enables us to give it in full in our columns, as we do to-day, us, besides the grace of eloquence, native to the distinguished speaker, which adorns the speech, and the glowing and just tribute which it pays to the departed statesman, the speech does honor to Mr. TYLER for a generosity of spirit, which all readers will appreciate who are familiar with the relations which conflicting views of public duty produced between Mr. CLAY and Mr. TYLER during the Presidency of the latter.

SPEECH OF EX-PRESIDENT TYLER.

Mr. President and Gentlemen: I frankly confess that I did not anticipate the call you have made upon me. I came prepared, opportunity was given, to say a few words of the distinguished man whose memory you have, so far as marble could do it, immortalized. But, in speaking of him, I shall of necessity speak of the Union. I came up to witness the proceedings of to-day. It is a great spectacle, that of magnifying the statue of one who has passed away from earth. It is the glorifying his name, as far as marble can accomplish it. It is the rescuing from the tomb those features which were venerable in their day and generation.

To do this, on yonder grounds, and in the shadow of the Capitol, which is hallowed by great events and great names, and this too in advance of similar tributes to the heroes and statesmen of other days, who drew their sustenance from Virginia's maternal breast, and made their names illustrious, is no ordinary event. And yet it is right; it is right to reclaim the resemblance, while it may be done, of one of Virginia's sons, who in early life left the old homestead for a new one in the West, under the nursing care of her oldest daughter. It may now be said, after the manner of the inscription on the tomb of the Mantua swain: "Virginia gave him birth, Kentucky gave him a grave, the United States furnished him a theatre for his labors."—I trust that the day is not distant when these public grounds will exhibit to an admiring public the resuscitated features of a grand host of departed patriots, each, after its own way, to be a silent but forcible monitor of that immortality of fame which succeeds a life of high and honorable action.

It is known to all present, and therefore but as well be spoken, that there was a period in my own political life when the man whose memory you are this day honoring stood in a formidable antagonism to me. His blows fell heavily and thickly upon me, and doubtless some of the bruises and scars which they inflicted remain to the present day. He struck with a gauntlet hand, and that hand was heavy. He required an impossibility, but let that pass. After I too shall have bade the world good night, history, if it serves them worthy of her record, will gather up the incidents of those times and represent them truly. Be it so.—I turn away from them and go back to other times. I recall the image of Henry Clay upon my entering Congress. His eloquent voice had resounded through the country long before that. He had efficiently sustained the administration of Mr. Jefferson, and had marshalled the Republican hosts under Mr. Madison, that battled in what has been not inaptly called the second war of independence. He had won the prestige of an immense popularity. In 1816 I entered Congress as the Representative of this metropolitan district. Then I became personally acquainted with Mr. Clay. He was the Speaker of the House, and embodied in his person all the essentials for that high office. Bold, resolute, fearless—of commanding personal attributes, with a voice that might be modulated to any note—he preserved perfect order in that body, often under trials and circumstances which threatened to break forth in tumult. The great triumvirate was there. Clay and Calhoun had won laurels in debate. Webster was gradually raising his head above the crowd. There he sat for the most part silent, wrapped in his own deep meditations. He culminated in full renown some few years after, and having witnessed the spread of his name over the world, he went to his grave, grand, noble, magnificent in his patriotism, amid the profound regrets of the country. Little did I then dream that a personal regard was to spring up between the first of these great men and myself, to continue uninterrupted, in despite of radical differences of opinion on essential questions of public policy, for fourteen years of public service, and still less, that, at a greatly subsequent period, the other two were to spring to my side as my trusted friends and counsellors in the arduous and difficult administration of public affairs. There they are, the marked men of an age! Indulge me, in a single expression of pride and gratification; it is that a more enduring monument than brass or marble can give, has been built up to them, by the Legislature of Virginia, on the map of the State. There they are, the household words of the people of the State, in their legislative halls, and in their daily avocations. Looking at that map, I find myself surrounded by many illustrious names of my Cabinet. Some were there of old times, my own, reflective of honor done my revered father, is there, and there too are found the names of Upshur and Gilmer.

The times to which I allude were times of greatness. Congress was indeed the fit emblem of our first institutions. Perfect order prevailed in its deliberations. With such a Speaker, it could not be otherwise.

He acted fully up to the duties of this high office. Thoroughly acquainted with the principles of parliamentary law, he permitted no violation to pass without reproof. It was, in fact, the most orderly body I ever saw.

"Whom Mr. Clay mingled in the debates, it was with a power and force of eloquence which was rarely, if ever, surpassed."

SLAVERY, AND THE M. E. CHURCH.—In the New York Methodist Conference the "Eric resolution," which calls upon the general conference to "change the rule of discipline that all slaveholding shall be cause for excommunication, have been negatived by the decisive vote of 123 to 48.

SELLING LIQUOR TO DRUNKEN MEN A CRIME IN MISSISSIPPI.—The Supreme Court of Mississippi has affirmed the validity of the law making it penal for retailers to sell liquor to a drunken man, and declaring that the owner of the establishment is responsible for the act of his barkeeper on his premises.

THE occultation of the brilliant planet Venus by the Moon, came off on Tuesday evening last, according to programme. The sky was clear and beautiful, and the appearance of the affair highly interesting. On Thursday evening the planet Jupiter went through the same performance; but as the gentlemen always behind the ladies in beauty and excellence, the scene was somewhat inferior in brilliance to that of Tuesday evening.

THE election for Mayor of Philadelphia takes place to-morrow. Mayor HENRY is a candidate for re-election.

A Republican State Convention, to send Delegates to the National Convention at Chicago, was held at Baltimore on Thursday last. It gave rise to great excitement, and those who assembled were in imminent danger of being mobbed—but the police were out in strength and protected them. They were obliged to leave their place of assembly, but afterwards met at a private dwelling and there appointed delegates to the Convention at Chicago. One of the delegates was pursued with yells and cries of "lynch him," "tar and feather him," by a infuriate mob. He took refuge in the Marine Bank, when the police intervened and saved him from their violence.—This kind of behavior does no good to the cause of Slavery, they may rest assured.

W. C. A. LAWRENCE, late Speaker of the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, died on the 22d, at Harrisburg.

ATTORNEY GENERAL BLACK intends prosecuting Mr. Schenck on the charge of perjury, growing out of his testimony before the Covode committee. His most intimate friends say he distinctly admitted the existence of the President's letter as recently published, but denied the existence of one of the character the witness described in the course of conversation, and which Gov. Walker never even pretended to have in his possession. It is further stated that Judge Black, acting by the advice of his friends, has made no reply to Gov. Walker, but in a note addressed to Walker's friend, Senator Brown, on Saturday, delivered by Secretary Thompson, he denied the existence of any reason why Gov. Walker should request him to go out of the District to receive a hostile message, even if he were not conscientiously opposed to that mode of adjusting differences.

A gentleman who has just passed through Illinois and Iowa says that spring wheat is about six inches high, and looking remarkably well. Farmers there, taught by sad experience of the failure of particular crops, are now adopting the judicious policy of diversifying their products, and especially of turning a part of their attention to cattle and green crops. They therefore expect no more such disastrous seasons as they have experienced; for it appears that farmers who acted upon the above plan, did well, even in the worst years. He says that business is reviving, property, rising again, and everything in the West cheerful and buoyant, especially in Chicago.

A severe and protracted drought prevails throughout the South. The Charleson Mercury says: Flowers and early fruits, strawberries, &c., in this section, are crisp and buried up with an atmosphere varying from eighty to ninety degrees, and no rain—not even a fall of dew—is requisite to their growth. This drought seems to be universal throughout the Southern country. Rain, rain, is the word everywhere. The cotton, the sugar, the corn needs rain. So long a period of dry weather has not been witnessed in early spring before for years in that State.
